

Student reportedly raped in library bathroom

Student Health Center, Personal Counseling Services Representative, Rosemary O'Neill explained how victims of rape commonly refrain from telling anybody about their assault because of shame or fear of reprisal on many cases.

"The majority of rape cases go unreported," said O'Neill, "the few that do report it take anywhere from two hours to two weeks to report."

Victims often feel it was their fault or that they could have avoided it. "Many people will say that the victim deserved it somehow by something they may have done. What they don't understand is that nothing justifies a person being assaulted, no matter what."

On Wednesday, Bay Area Women Against Rape held a meeting in the Epler Gym to discuss the rape with concerned student, faculty and staff. About 65 people showed up, with roughly a quarter of them being faculty and staff.

Ohlone Police Chief Steve Fajardo explained what measures police were taking to manage the situation. "The Fremont Police are doing the complete investigation," said Fajardo. "We have offered to cooperate with them with anything they need."

The campus police will patrol more on foot and will offer escorts to anyone who feels the need for it.

In addition to Fajardo, Student Health Center Counselor Rosemary O'Neill offered her services to anyone who wanted to talk about any past incidents they had.

Twenty-five percent of all Americans have been sexually assaulted, according to Marcia Blackstock, executive director of Bay Area Women Against Rape. Blackstock, along with Sexual Assault response Team Coordinator Diane Beynon demonstrated a variety of deterrents to avoid being sexually assaulted.

Blackstock told of four techniques to be used in critical situations. "Be aware," said Blackstock, "I am surprised of how many folks don't know who is around them at all times. Don't look down, make eye contact with anyone who is around you."

Blackwell spoke of the benefits of keeping a circle of space around one self for personal space to avoid uncomfortable situations with a potential rapist.

Secondly, Blackstock encouraged being verbal. "Don't be afraid to yell at someone who is invading your personal space. It may sound unpleasant, but it could save you from being assaulted."

The third step involved various self-defense moves in case one is attacked. The last piece of advice from Blackstock was to do what they were told by the aggressor. "Trust your ability to do what your body tells you to do what is right. Trust your instinct. If you feel that fighting off this person may get you killed, don't fight back."

Chef Fajardo finally proposed that the Self Defense Institute come on campus to teach basic martial arts to interested students, faculty and staff.

One-act plays open

By JESSICA LOSEE

"One Acts," a series of five one-act plays performed by the Ohlone College Student Repertory Company, opened Wednesday night.

"Timely (Philadelphia) Manuever" featured a young couple on a blind date and two friends who go to a restaurant, the four are a ticking time bomb just waiting to explode.

"Words, Words, Words," the second play, features three wild characters bumbling their way through a science experiment. Franz, Milton, and Swift made the crowd go absolutely bananas over their monkey business.

The third play, "Time Flies" featuring two Mayflies, made a buzz among the audience with this look into their little lowly lives.

One look at the fourth play's title makes one wonder what it has in store for the audience. "Whores of Academia" offers the audience a funny look into the intellectual side of whoring.

The last play "The Problem," opens the audience to a wife's dilemma of a rather abnormal life with her husband. This odd couple fumbles through a blaringly colorful predicament; they show the true meaning of marital bliss.

"One Acts" is a wonderful solution to a boring weeknight, it will be showing Thursday and Friday at 8 p.m. in Ohlone's Nummi Theatre.

Student arrested on assault charge

Ohlone student Steven Rodriguez was arrested Tuesday, charged with assault, obstructing police and disturbing the peace, according to Chief of Police Steve Fajardo.

Police said Rodriguez was instigating a fight on campus after 12:30 p.m. and was brought to Dean of Student Affairs Ron Travenick's office to sort out the details of the incident.

Fajardo said Rodriguez became increasingly more emotional, until he finally lunged at Travenick, although he failed to make contact with him.

Two Campus Security officers were needed to subdue Rodriguez. One of the officers, Ben Peralta, was injured, receiving an abrasion to his left elbow. Fremont Police were then dispatched to formally arrest Rodriguez, doing so without further incident.

Fajardo stresses that this arrest is completely unrelated to the recent rape on campus.

Budget not looking good board of trustees would have their authority replaced by State appointed trustees.

One college not on the watch list is Ohlone. With a "Rainy Day Reserve" of $450,000, Ohlone is prepared for the worst. Schultz explained that, "We'll be able to weather what's coming at us, but it'll be tough."

On March 24, a statewide meeting will be held at the chancellor's office in Sacramento that will divulge how Ohlone is doing financially, compared to other community colleges in the state. Expectations are hopeful, yet enrollment is still below expectations.
