Trustees kept busy over break center's date of completion has already fallen a semester behind schedule.

The trustees also awarded Treadway a 5 percent raise for his performance as an administrator. The raise was retroactive to July 1, 2005 and brought his salary to $185,995 from $178,120.

President Treadway also informed the board that Sobrato Development Co. had been chosen over two other bidders to work on the mixed-use project's frontage development but that the southeast parcel would simply "sit for the time being without any activity."

The southeast space was the subject of considerable controversy last semester, when the board voted not to sell the property after advertising that they were willing to sell or lease. Currently, the option to lease or "swap" the land has no offers.

The board has experienced its share of drama over the break during its election for board president. Bob Brunton received the position after two deadlocked ballots.

The position of board president was traditionally elected to different trustee members on a rotational basis, with the vice president of the previous year being voted in unopposed. Trustee member Garrett Yee nominated fellow member Nick Nardolillo despite the tradition because he believed that Nardolillo possessed communication skills that would help the school through the next two years of construction projects. In the final vote, Nardolillo withdrew his nomination, leaving Brunton as the sole candidate.

Brunton was voted in 6-0 with only Yee abstaining. Nardolillo receive the position of vice president and Treadway was named board secretary. The board meets twice a month on the second and fourth Wednesdays in the Child Development Center and a recording is played on Ohlone TV at 7 p.m. the following day.

generation of students. Today's students, reared on television, computers and the Internet "are no longer the people our educational system was designed to teach," remarked Treadway in a quote from "Digital Natives, Digital Immigrants" from "On the Horizon" by Marc Prensky.

Treadway called for a classroom that appeals to today's "multi-sensory" learners and integrates textbooks with social interaction and multimedia. Though the use of these methods are meant to complement Ohlone's Learning College model, a classroom that ultimately relates the world at large to our individual, personal experiences is what Treadway strives for.

Free pizza and soda to attract TV students

Ohlone's television department will offer free pizza and soda today and Wednesday from noon to 1 p.m. In an attempt to attract students to a career in the video world.

In part of a wide-ranging marketing plan, television instructors will be standing by in the Quad to demonstrate the department's digital video cameras. Students who stop by will be given tickets for free pizza, which will be available in the TV studio in the Gary Soren Smith Center for Fine and Performing Arts.

Gary Kauf, director of Television Services, said the courses he especially wants to promote are:

- Broadcasting 136, Shooting Film and digital Video, taught by Bill Moore, a veteran cameraman with 20 years of experience at KTVU.

- Broadcasting 138, Avid Film and Video Editing, taught by Bob Gottman, who has edited at a variety of Bay Area TV stations, including KICU, KNTV and others. Avid is a non-linear editing program used to produce many advertisements and feature films.

Kauf said other efforts being made to increase enrollment include distributing Ohlone class schedules containing fliers promoting TV classes. The schedules are being distributed at the Newpark Mall, Fry's and other locations.

Kauf also plans to send TV students to every high school in Ohlone's district to recruit new students.
