SPREAD THE WORD!

Here's the best thing about community college: it's like practicing for life. You get to try things out. If you discover you don't really like nuclear physics, try something else. Like real estate. Whatever. If you like to write, are good at telling stories, think it's cool to know what's going on behind the scenes, and if you like the feeling of finishing something important on deadline, maybe you should try media work. Start out with a mass media survey class, Journalism 155. Or the beginning newswriting class, Journalism 101A. Both transfer. Work on the campus newspaper, the Monitor, Journalism 170, 171 or 172, for one, two or three units. Want to sell advertising? Try Journalism 176, 177 or 178. Good at taking photos? Journalism 146, 147 or 148. How about working on Midnight, the Ohlone arts and literary magazine, which you're holding in your hands? Sign up for Journalism 173, 174 or 175. These are all hands-on courses, where you learn by doing, just like in real life. Interested? Sign up, or contact the Journalism Department, Room 5310, monitor@ohlone.edu, 510-659-6074.
