

'Yes I Can' gets boost

By SEAN NERO
Staff writer

Students helped the Black History Month Auction reach its $200 goal last Thursday in front of Building 1.

Four prizes were auctioned off during the Feb. 26 fundraising event, including a photographic journal of President Barack Obama titled, "The Inauguration of President Obama" and written by the Washington Post.

Other prizes included a large painting of two giraffes grazing, a book by Charlie Samuels titled America, The Making of A Nation, and a compact disc collection of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. original sermons.

The proceeds from the ticket sales will go toward the "Yes I Can" Scholarship, which will be awarded at a later time. The scholarship is targeted toward under-represented and financially disadvantaged students, particularly African Americans.

ASOC plans march have a place where the students can chill," said Dan Zhou, legislative representative of the ASOC. Students typically hang out in the Hyman Hall, which can disturb students trying to study.

Furniture for a recreational room on the Newark campus has arrived. Activities include a pool table, a foosball table, and eight laptops. The room is scheduled to open the week after spring break. Students will need to have paid their $5 activities fee as well as have a student ID card or some other form of identification to use the room.

The college planning summit is planned for next Thursday. This event will be focused on reviewing goals and objectives for the college. The event is important because it effects Ohlone's accreditation along with deciding the direction the college will take on several issues. Classes will be canceled in the afternoon as a result of the summit.
