One more similarity with the Second World War that has been staring us all in the face is Donald Trump. The first and most obvious similarity is his willingness to place all blame for problems in the country on immigrants. He announced his candidacy for president by degrading immigrants from Mexico, and is now throwing people of the Muslim faith in the mix of his degradation.

In recent days he has gone as far as saying that people who are Muslim should be required to register and carry a card with them so as to be easily identified. This is exactly what Hitler did to the Jewish people in the areas he controlled, and Trump is completely fine trying to replicate that system.

Trump has even gone so far to say that he would be willing to close down mosques to fight "ISIS." All he is doing is spreading hatred, and living in a post-9/11 world has taught me anything, it's that people cannot be rational when they are pumped full of fear.

We continue to tell Americans that they are in danger and continue to associate an entire religion with one terrorist organization that has nothing to do with the rest of Islam, we will continue to see hate crimes and the marginalization of an entire group.

Individually, we can make a change by simply being aware that this is happening and trying to make others aware of the language they are using. Don't let America end up on an endless xenophobic loop.

ligion that pulled the trigger and it is not the responsibility of every person who practices the religion to pay for the actions of others. But it is everyone's responsibility to condemn this man's actions, label him as a terrorist, and charge him as such.
